Social and Personal

Closing a brilliant series of informal dances at the Executive Mansion, the dance last evening, given by the Governor and Mrs. Henry C. Stuart, was an enchanting event. The Governor and his wife greeted their guests in the Blue Room, which was hung with pink roses and lilies, against a drapery of Southern silk, and the hostesses wore a Duane model of rose colored tulle with trimmings of children embroidered in colored crystals. The tulle of cowbunny lace was looped up in the back with a butterfly drapery of illusion and the sleeves were formed of the same embroidered chiffon as the bodice. Mrs. Stuart carried an armful of pink orchids.

The two mantels in the ballroom were draped in smilax caught up with bows of crystal gauze and ribbon. One was done in pale blue bows and decorated in white lilies, pink lupins and Killarney roses, and the other in pink with pink snapdragons and tall wicker vases of Easter lilies and purple lilies. The halls were banked in palest pink roses, and garlands of these flowers wound the stairways. In the dining room, where a buffet supper was served at 11 o'clock, the table was set with an exquisite centerpiece of white lilies and orchids, and green ribbon festooned the chandelier and caught up the bunches of white lilies that were suspended over the table. There were red roses in the library in tall silver vases, and the whole home was a mass of beautiful blossoms. A string orchestra, screened by palms, pink flowers and bay trees, played for the dancing.

Among the guests invited last evening were Mrs. Martin W. Littleton, of Washington; Mr. and Mrs. Jordan Leake, Mr. and Mrs. Eppa Hutton, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. John Landstreet, Miss Gwendolyn Rutherford, Miss Anne Mason Lee, Miss Mary Tompkins, Mrs. Julia H. Hill, Miss Delia Davenport, Miss Mary Nicholas, Miss Archer Joyner, Miss Julie Joyner, Miss Nellie Tompkins, Miss Katherine Prentiss, Miss Eugene Selden Taylor, James Cowardin, Miss Martha Martin, Foster Witt, Miss Caroline Martin, Miss Martha Roberts, Mr. Crenshaw, A. R. Hagner, Jr., Miss Florence Hagner, of Hagerstown, Md., Mr. and Mrs. John Leary, Miss Edmonia Martin, and many others.

A Continental Ball.
The first Continental ball ever given here will take place at the Richmond Hotel on Wednesday. It is to be a perfectly fascinating dance, similar to the various affairs of the kind that take place at Mardi Gras and fetes and balls throughout Europe. The place will be strung with gay colored lights and flowers, and there will be confetti and favors and all sorts of novel introductions in the way of dances and figures. Hundreds of Richmond folk will attend, for Terpsichore, the great goddess of dances and music, too, for that matter, has laid her hand upon society throughout the country and joined them, willy-nilly, helter-skelter, in a dancing, ecstatic melange. House dances and private dances in hotel ballrooms no longer suffice to quench the insatiable desire of society's devotees, and new classes and dances everywhere all the days.

This ball is to be something altogether new and different in Richmond, and society is looking forward to the entertainment with the greatest eagerness.

Heugensbourg, of the violin. In the evening Mrs. Johnson entertained some of the debutantes and the young men.

AN APPEAL TO WOMEN

By One Who, From Her Past Experience, is Capable of Giving Sound Advice

Bud, Ky.—"I want to urge all weak women," says Mrs. Lizzie R. Barker, of this place, "to give Cardui, the woman's tonic, a fair trial, for I believe it will do for them what it has done for me."

"I was a sufferer for 13 years, with such pains I could scarcely walk or stand on my feet. I had headache, dizziness and fainting spells."

"After many treatments failed to help me, my husband persuaded me to give Cardui, the woman's tonic, a trial, and I did so. Now I feel like a new woman. I am well of all these troubles, and can do all my household work with pleasure."

"When I commenced taking Cardui I was not able to sit up. Now I am enjoying good health and do all of my work."

"I shall keep Cardui in my home all the time. There is not any medicine that equals it for women."

"We also urge you to try Cardui, the woman's tonic, for your troubles. It has helped so many thousands of women in the past half century that we feel sure it will help you, too."

"Prepared from perfectly harmless vegetable ingredients, Cardui is the remedy for you to use. It can do you nothing but good."

Try it.

LORD VENTRY'S SON SUCCEEDS TO PEERAGE

Recalls Wide Swath Cut by Swindler of Assumed Name of De Moleyns.

BY LA MARQUESE DE FONTENAY.

Lord Ventry's death, and the succession to his Irish peerage, the eldest son, Colonel the Hon. Frederick Evelyn de Moleyns, formerly of the Fourth Hussars, serves to recall the very wide swath cut by a swindler of the assumed name of Evelyn de Moleyns, in New York and other cities of the United States, but more especially in Chicago, in 1903.

The man turned out to be a former valet of the new Lord Ventry, and, having been in his service for a number of years, he not only became intimately acquainted with all his family affairs, but had also succeeded in acquiring his peculiar mannerisms, and imitating a marked resemblance to his ex-employer. With charges of bigamy, brought not by one, but by several women, and with many clever frauds to his credit, he is, unless I am much mistaken, still "doing time" either in jail or at Sing Sing.

Sometimes he passed himself off as his former employer, and sometimes as the latter's younger brother, Richard, who happened to be in Chicago at the time when the man had just been extradited from New York, and who confronted him in jail. The Hon. Richard Evelyn de Moleyns, on that occasion told an extraordinary story to the police, of the manner in which the ex-valet had been impersonating various members of Lord Ventry's family, not only on this side of the Atlantic, but also in Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, on the Continent of Europe, and even in England itself, raising money everywhere on checks and notes bearing the Evelyn de Moleyns signature.

The family name of Lord Ventry's family has only been Evelyn de Moleyns since 1811. Before that time the name was Mullins. The change having been made by the third Lord Ventry, grandfather of the new peer, who secured a royal license authorizing him to effect the alteration. The first Lord Ventry, started life as plain Thomas Mullins, of Burroughm, in the County of Kerry, received a baronetcy in 1797, and a peerage in the year 1800, for his services in bringing about the legislative union between England and Ireland.

Until the third Lord Ventry, the members of the family were content to regard a certain Frederick William Mullins, member of Parliament for Tralee, as the founder of their house. The third lord, however, was more ambitious, and caused a genealogical tree to be constructed, showing his descent from a certain William de Molle, who, coming over with William the Conqueror, took part in a battle of Hastings, and received a grant of lands for his bravery on that occasion.

His immediate descendants are the Mullins, who distinguished themselves in the early crusades, but also a connection of the late Duke of Aosta, did not disdain to receive from him the Order of the Golden Fleece when he, like Jesus in the Holy Land, even the wars of Marlborough, that most accomplished of genealogists, who is responsible for so many genealogical tales and mythical family trees, did not find it possible to trace this, and in his standard "Peerages" department over these pretensions in significant silence.

Among the most noted members of the family in more modern times was that genial and witty judge, Thomas Evelyn de Moleyns, who, by reason of his very agreeable manners and lively conversation, even under the most trying circumstances, was a favorite throughout the length and breadth of Ireland by the name of "Silky Tom of Dublin." His mother, the Hon. Mrs. Edw. de Moleyns, was one of the most celebrated beauties of her day, and much of the Peninsular War, in which her husband took an active part. She met with most extraordinary adventures, and, lost her leg, which had to be amputated without anesthesia, and covered, subsequently bore her husband a large family of children, and lived to the ripe old age of ninety.

The new Lord Ventry, who won the Distinguished Service Order for conspicuous gallantry during the Boer war, is a bachelor, fifty-three, well set up and good looking, and, needless to say, a Conservative, and, therefore, opposed to home rule. It is probable that in due course he will be elected by his fellow peers of Ireland to succeed his father in representing their order in the House of Lords at Westminster.

Just before leaving Madrid for Seville the other day, King Alfonso bestowed the Order of the Golden Fleece upon the Marquis de la Mina, who is almost as well known in London and Paris as in the Spanish capital, and who, a Liberal in politics, has long been a most trusted member of the entourage of Dowager Queen Christina and of his young sovereign, his sister was the late Duchess of Alba and of Berwick, who died in Paris ten years ago, and was consanguine to his uncle of the present Duke of Alba, as well as of the Duke of Penaranda, the crack polo player of Spain, and also of their sister, the handsome Duchess of Santona, popularly known as Dona Sol.

Already very rich in his own right, the Marquis de la Mina will become one of the wealthiest men in Spain on the death of his sister, the Duchess of Alba, the most wonderful old lady in the land of the Hidalgos—certainly the grandest. For she is Duchess of Fernan, in her own right, as well as possessor of four other duchies, seven marquises, eleven titles of countess, besides numerous other dignities, all of which will on her death, not only then, come to the Marquis de la Mina.

They were shared by his Italian-born father, until the latter's death, according to Spanish custom and law, he was known as the Duke de Fernan, and was the Duke of Fernan, in the most magnificent fashion. Inter-course with the duchess was a constant source of perplexity to the wife of the present Duke, who, as a woman, and who was totally devoid of any manners, breeding or savoir faire, mistreated or dined at the Elysee, in her capacity of duchess, and was always in a dilemma, as to how to address her. Sometimes she would apostrophize her as "Madame la Duchesse," but more often as either "Madame Fernan" or "Madame de la Mina." She was never quite sure which was right, if, indeed, either.

The Marquis de la Mina is one of the leading figures of the Spanish turf, and has endeavored, more than any other now living to popularize horse racing in Spain, in the place of bull fighting. He maintains the finest racing stable in Spain, which carries off each year the honors of the Spanish Cup, and has a private race course of his own at La Flamenca, his fine place on the banks of the Tagus, near Aranjuez, where he keeps his principal stud farm.

The latter was founded by his father, seigneur of one of the great houses of the aristocracy of Italy, and who, being not only a friend, but also a connection of the late Duke of Aosta, did not disdain to receive from him the Order of the Golden Fleece when he, like Jesus in the Holy Land, even the wars of Marlborough, that most accomplished of genealogists, who is responsible for so many genealogical tales and mythical family trees, did not find it possible to trace this, and in his standard "Peerages" department over these pretensions in significant silence.

The Marquis de la Mina's only brother bears the title of Duke of Montbellano, and is married to the sister of the Duke of Aosta, and is among the richest landowners in Mexico, who are so noted in England and on the Continent of Europe, for their prowess on the polo field.

The Marquis de la Mina is married to a daughter of the late Count Xiquena, a granddaughter of old Marshal Concha, marquis of Havana, and makes his home with her in the superb old Certosa Palace, at Madrid, filled from cellar to roof with art treasures and with historic relics, conspicuous among which are the saddle of the ill-fated Boabdil, last of the Moorish Kings of Granada, and the coat of mail worn by an ancestor of the marquis, when he entered Granada, riding by the side of King Ferdinand after the capture of that city from the Moors in 1492.
